Getting started in the garden

Whether you are starting a new garden from a fresh plot or are developing an existing garden you have acquired it will always involve a certain amount of care. To help you be as efficient as possible in the garden you will require the right gardening tool for the right job. Many of these core tools will be in constant use so choosing good quality, reliable equipment that is lightweight and comfortable in use is important.

Gardening is a very rewarding leisure activity – it offers you exercise, fresh air, a feeling of achievement and in return can provide you with either a lovely garden which is an extension to the living area of your home, or garden grown vegetables to eat, or even both. So whether you want to create a relaxing outdoor space to enjoy or establish a vegetable and fruit growing area, you are going to need the right tools to help you do it.

On this page we highlight some of the key tools you will need for a new garden, there may be others you find you need but these will give you a good mix of tools along with other equipment to get you started. Or if you have a mature garden which now needs a greater focus on maintenance you may find our suggested list of maintenance equipment useful.

An introduction to multi-change®

Our multi-change® range is specifically designed to be lightweight and comfortable to use. Each tool in the collection has its own features that make the tools work harder and last longer.

The ‘every tool head fits every handle’ multi-change® range comprises of a selection of 14 handles of different lengths (to suit your height or the task in hand) and over 60 tool heads to cater for any type of gardening task.

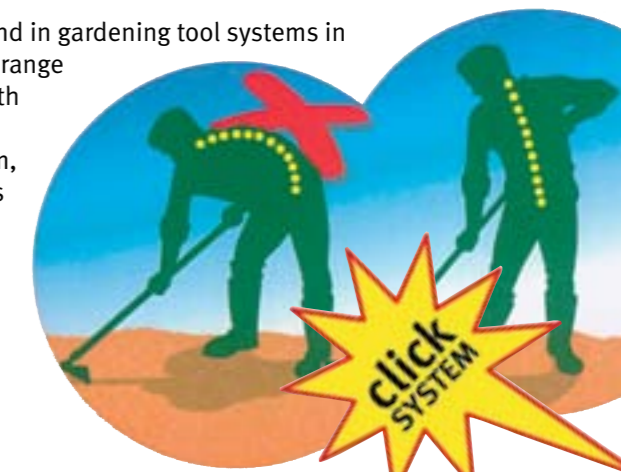

When you find a handle that you love, you can choose from our comprehensive selection of tool heads and just ‘click’ them together to get any gardening job done with a straight back. When you have your handle, you can keep adding to your collection of tool heads as it only takes a quick press of a button to release one tool head and swap it for another. Every tool head in this collection will fit whichever handle you purchase so you can convert from cultivating to weeding to raking by switching tool heads and using the same handle, saving you storage space, money and most importantly a lot of backache!

A Guide to Lawn Care

A lush green lawn is the envy of many a neighbour who struggles to win the on-going battle to keep healthy grass free of weeds. There are several maintenance areas to consider: mowing; edging; thatching; aeration; weeding; and fertilisation; and they don't all need to be labour intensive.

Weeding

Weeds in the lawn can be very difficult to remove, especially dandelions that can have a 1" taproot. Simply pulling the weed often results in the taproot being fractured allowing it to re-grow.

A weed extractor is a clever tool head that can be attached to a multi-change® handle then simply pushed into the ground, twisted and pulled out, the weed with root will be removed with this easy action. A weeding knife can also be used on tough weeds with the footrest providing extra leverage.

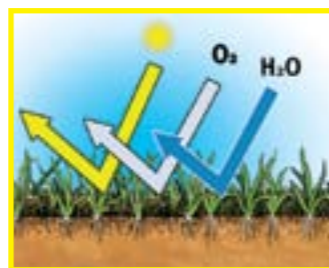

Mowing

Spring time is when most gardeners turn to their lawn to begin the regular task of mowing. WOLF-Garten offer a selection of power tools to help keep your lawn tidy throughout the growing season. There are lawnmowers including an environmentally efficient BluePower range and electric or battery power trimmers to keep the edges and those hard to reach areas cut short. The multi-change® range also offers a lawn edge iron and lawn edge trimmer to keep turf edges tidy.

In addition to the busy mowing season, it is the work in Autumn time that is most beneficial to producing a healthy thick green lawn. It is during September/October when you should examine your lawn to decide what action needs to be taken to remove thatch and to aerate the soil.

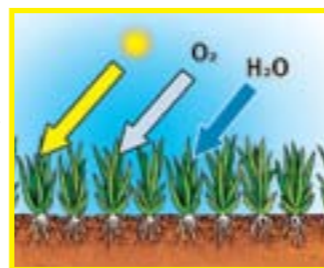

Thatching

Thatch is a fibrous layer which forms on the surface of many lawns. When this layer is an inch or more in thickness a semi-waterproof layer is created which prevents the water flowing into the soil and to the roots. In Autumn the effects are more serious as the thatch prevents the thickening of the turf and creates a constant wet organic blanket which sits on top of the grass and encourages disease.

To prevent the formation of thatch, regular raking and brushing will remove the debris that builds up to create the problem. The key time for de-thatching is Autumn; use a rake to gather leaves and other debris off the grass. You can use a lawn rake to break up small amounts of thatch but occasionally if it is very thick you will need to scarify instead. You can manually scarify using a multi-change® moss removal rake tool head which will bite into the lawn to lift up the thatch. Alternatively, if you have a large lawn an electric scarifier will be very effective in removing the organic matter quickly. After de-thatching, a lawn can look bad temporarily but will recover rapidly with new shoots growing to produce a thickened healthier lawn in Spring.

Aeration

Aerating is another task that can be required annually, particularly in clay soils and high impacted ground. The key benefit to aeration is to loosen compacted soils to allow the grass roots to penetrate deeper into the soil making them stronger and more resilient to the effects of drought and disease. A roller moss removal multi-change® head opens the soil and pulls out small plugs allowing the nutrients, water and air to be absorbed into the soil essential for grass growth. After aeration, it is an ideal time to over seed the lawn and also to fertilise. New to WOLF-Garten this year is our lawn seed and fertiliser range which can help improve the condition of your lawn.

Choosing Pruners

There are so many pruners how do you know which one to use? Well, like loppers that all depends on the cutting job in hand, is it trimming new stems or tougher woodier growth.

Bypass pruners work on a scissor like cutting action with one blade 'bypassing' the other. They are ideal for cutting growth which is younger (up to 2 years old) as they provide a very clean cut, essential for maintaining a healthy plant or shrub. Little pressure is required in pruning of this nature so the pruners themselves are light in weight. Bypass pruners can still be used on older cuttings but a little more effort will be required by the user.

For older thicker stems it is best to use an anvil pruner which will reduce the strain on the wrist and hand. With anvil pruners the blade closes against a softer metal on the lower jaw, this does not produce such a clean cut as a bypass pruner which is why it is not suited to young stems but more to older wood where the cleanliness of the cut is not so important. Always consider the density of the wood you are cutting and ensure you have the right tool for the job, you may want to upgrade the cutting tool to avoid unnecessary strain on the hand.

Choosing Loppers

A simple rule for choosing the right lopper is bypass for younger branches and anvil for hardier or dead wood. It is especially important to ensure you use the right tool for the job when cutting greener branches as the bypass lopper allows for a more accurate cut without crushing the branch.

Be sure that the lopper will be able to make one clean cut, otherwise you cause multiple wounds to the branch that can attract insects or disease more quickly. The longer the handles the more leverage you will have when cutting, making it easier to achieve a clean cut. Telescopic handles are available in the WOLF-Garten range to reach taller bushes.

Other aspects to consider when choosing your lopper is a good non slip hand grip, light in weight for easy manoeuvrability and the cutting diameter to ensure it is suitable for the branches you will be tackling. It is also advisable to have a tree saw available when cutting a branch in case it becomes too difficult for the lopper, you can view our multi-change® tree care on page 18 for more information on alternative cutting products.

WOLF-Garten loppers combine precision and power to add up to an exceptional cutting performance from every tool in the range.

Forged Digging Tools

WOLF-Garten spades and forks are hand crafted in Great Britain using traditional skills and processes. The solid-forged production process uses one piece of exceptionally strong boron steel for the tool-head and shaft as opposed to several pieces being welded together. This construction is essential in achieving the right level of strength and durability. All spades and forks come with a life time guarantee.
